HELP YOU CAN COUNT ON
MID-COUNTY UNITED MINISTRIES, INC.

WITH MUM'S HELP, EVICTION TURNS TO NEW START

J.M. HAD WORKED since he was a teenager, sometimes holding two jobs to support himself and his family.

Then last year, the mid-level property manager lost his job. The bills piled up as he searched for new employment. Soon he was thousands of dollars behind on the rent of the Wheaton townhouse where he and his wife and three children had lived for more than a decade. The landlord's eviction notice came in January 2015.

J.M. visited the county's crisis services office. From there he was directed to Mid-County United Ministries, and he told his story to Executive Director Larry White.

"It was tough emotionally," J.M. recalled. "I thought I should be able to work through any challenge. It took a lot for me to ask for help."

MUM provided $300, a typical amount for the nonprofit, which handles dozens of eviction cases annually. White also reached out to other organizations that could help, and he prepared referrals for funds from those organizations.

White and his staff provide more than financial assistance in these situations; they believe people in crisis also need a cordial welcome.

"The way we respect people who come in our office and treat them with dignity is not something they always get," White said. That guides the delivery of all MUM's services, which besides eviction help includes financial assistance for utility cutoffs and prescriptions and emergency groceries.

J.M. and his family have a new home in the county, and he's doing well in a new job.

"I really believe MUM helped keep my mind at ease as I was going through this process and as I was transitioning to new employment," he said. "Without your support this would have been a lot tougher."
